INTERESTING EXPERIMENT AT THE HALL

Fifteen Minutes' Play Enjoyed by Many

CHILDREN'S HOUR

Ability to Study Improved by Period of Relaxation

Another proof that this is the age of self expression for the child is being given by the residents of Strathcona Hall, and last night saw the inauguration of an interesting experiment.

It has been felt by some of the big boys that the children were too rough and noisy in their play. A huge mass meeting was held on Thursday night, and it was decided that if everyone was good during the early part of the evening they should be allowed to play to their hearts' content between the periods of a quarter to eleven and eleven.

It would have been most enjoyable to all those interested in child life if they could have been present at the first play hour last night. The expressions of joy on the faces of the young lads as they tried to play festive little tunes on the nozzles of fire hoses would give infinite pleasure to those who love to see spontaneous self-expression. Others pounded drums and gave those yells so dear to the heart of the reader of works on the Redskins.

The children's hour, while it was a great success last night, has not really got into its stride yet. A movement is on foot to provide drums, toy horns, skipping ropes and other playthings. When the movement is really started it is expected that representatives of the various nurseries of the city will be invited to attend.

It is only to be expected that any really enjoyable event will have some slightly sad features. Some of the kiddies rather overstepped the bounds of innocent play when they got into the reading room provided for adults, on the second floor, and tore up a few magazines, which they considered too pedantic. It is not expected that this will occur again, as the management committee will doubtless install some real magazines, such as John Martin's Book, Chatterbox, and possibly St. Nicholas, for the older and more precocious residents. Arrangements will be made with the publishers of any of the really sedate periodicals such as Life, which are considered necessary, to have them printed on untearable paper.

There were no other mishaps, but it is feared that unless some more easy instrument than the nozzle of a fire hose is provided there may be injuries to the delicate lungs of some of those aspiring to musical fame.

The most encouraging result of the experiment was the profound silence that prevailed during the time preceding and following the quarter of an hour of play.

All the rest of the time everyone was as good as gold.

WESTERNERS TO HEAR DR. TODD

Club Dinner Tuesday, Dec. 5th at 6:30 in Union

All McGill men from the West will be interested to learn that Dr. John L. Todd, past honorary president of the Western Club, has consented to attend the next meeting of the Western Club, and that he will deliver a special address on recent experiences in Europe. Last year a special scientific expedition went to Europe and Dr. Todd was the chosen Canadian representative. Dr. Todd, who is a McGill professor, is a well known authority on his subject. Although he came to McGill from the West, like all the members of the Western Club, he has travelled very extensively, especially in the tropics—and it will be a rare privilege to hear him talk of his travels. His account of last year's expedition will be illustrated by lantern slides.

Since Dr. Todd is soon leaving Montreal for the winter it will be necessary for the Western Club to hold their regular monthly meeting as early as Tuesday next, the 5th of December, in order to have the honour of his presence. The meeting will take the form of an informal dinner in the Union at 6:30 p.m. The arrangements will be similar to the last dinner, and any alterations will be announced later. The club is fortunate in having secured Dr. Todd as speaker of the evening, and a full turnout of Westerners will be expected.

QUEENS AND R.V.C. WILL MEET TONIGHT

All Invited to Debate in Convocation Hall

8:15 P.M. SHARP

"Resolved: Asiatic Immigration Should be Excluded"

All preparations have been completed for the Intercollegiate Debate that is to be held tonight in the Convocation Hall at 8:15 p.m. between Queen's and R.V.C. The subject chosen for the debate is of great interest to Canadians today and one which is occupying the attention of many. It is "Resolved, that Asiatic Immigration should be excluded from Canada."

The additional fact that Intercollegiate debating is the introduction of a new branch of women's competition between the different universities makes it of increasing interest to all. Tonight's event will be the first debate in which Queen's and R.V.C. have participated. Last year the question of Intercollegiate debating was brought up by the Delta Sigma Society and challenges were sent to Queen's and Varsity, but, unfortunately, it was considered too late in the season for any action to be taken in this matter. This year, however, Queen's has accepted the challenge and has sent down a formidable team to represent her. It is hoped that next year Varsity will also undertake to enter a team in this competition.

Miss D. Sutherland and Miss A. Mackenzie of Queen's will uphold the affirmative and Miss J. Foster and Miss L. Kerr will take the negative side.

As it is a very debatable subject an exceedingly interesting discussion is assured.

The debaters have been very fortunate in securing Dr. Helen Y. Reid as neutral judge, Dr. Cyrus Macmillan as representing Queen's, and Dr. Stephen Leacock as representing R.V.C.

All members of the faculty and students of McGill and all others who are interested are cordially invited to attend this debate—a new phase in women's college activities.

An additional attraction is the fact that an excellent pianist has been secured to play for dancing to be indulged in by one and all on conclusion of the debate.

APPRECIATION

The Union House Committee desires to express its appreciation of the services of the University Dance Orchestra and the Mandolin Club at the Jazz Teas in the Union Cafeteria, and of the Cafeteria staff, under Mr. Honneger, who were responsible for the successful catering at last night's Informal.

COLOUR JOY, AND HARMONY AT INFORMAL

Many Enjoyed Social Event Last Evening

GORGEOUS GOWNS

University Dance Orchestra Music Irresistible

Care, gloom, troubles and examination blues were thrown to the winds last night, when one hundred and forty-five joyous couples gathered in the Union ball room for the second Informal Dance of the season. The patronesses for the evening were Mrs. Tyndall and Mrs. MacMillan, and the University Dance Orchestra lived up to their enviable reputation, supplying a quality of music that was absolutely irresistible. The refreshments, furnished by the Union Cafeteria, were of the usual high standard.

Although the annual and inevitable mid-term examinations are looming up on a dangerously close horizon, and though the weather outside was damp and dismal, joy reigned supreme in the ball room last night. The orchestra, composed of Glenn Adney, "Chub" Le Baron, Bert Simpson, "Cliff" Menzies and Graeme Gardner, proved to be an unequalled antidote for the blues.

With the opening strain of the very first dance, all cares and troubles flitted out the windows or down the fire escape and all opposite and reactionary forces flitted in. The result was a perfect evening of undisturbed joy.

To describe the scene adequately is practically impossible, for there are not sufficient words in the language to satisfactorily complete the task. The decorations from the Junior Prom remained intact and many enthusiastic and favorable comments were made upon the attractiveness of the pleasing gold and blue colour scheme. And then there was that gorgeous moon, floating on a fleecy bank of clouds, as well as the huge owl, with its gleaming eyes denoting the number of the dance.

But for the members of the fair sex and their variegated and beautiful gowns the "Daily" reporter could only gaze in awe and wonder and realizing that he was a mere male, quickly saw the futility of trying to express the incoherent thoughts that surged within him. Sufficient to say that colour mingled with colour, the whole creating a combination that beggars description.

The conservative costuming of the sterner sex had a levelling effect, however, but even though the men were in a more sombre garb, they appeared to be enjoying themselves to the nth degree.

Supper was served after the seventh dance and the delightful refreshments, served by the Union caterer, were

CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE DECIDED TODAY

Queen's All Set for the Final Game

Eskimos, the Western champions from Edmonton, arrived in Kingston yesterday. Once more the Eskimos are travelling East with more confidence than last year. They are out to wipe out their defeat of last year by the Argonauts of 23-0. Coach White has profited by his experience of last year, and has a husky bunch of line plungers, as before, but in addition, he has trained a backfield that will stop those long end runs that have featured Queen's play this season.

Coach Bill Hughes is training his men hard, as he always has; he is not going to make the mistake of taking his opponents too lightly, and is working his pack hard. It is improbable that "Red" McKelvey will play, as he is suffering from internal injuries sustained in the Queens-Varsity game. But all know if "Red" has his own way, he will play, if he does so on a stretcher. Lewis is also in hospital, but it is thought that he will be in his position of snaphack as usual.

Queens have the advantage over the Eskimos in not having the long train journey, but Coach White has made arrangements to have his bunch work out before the game, providing the weather permits the removal of the straw from the field, which was put on some days ago as a protection against a fall of snow. If the weather conditions do not permit the removal of the straw, other

LECTURE ON NEAR EAST CONDITIONS

Prof. MacLean Gives Fine Account of Arabia

GREAT UNREST

The Influence of the New British Government

A most interesting illustrated lecture was given last evening in the Diocesan College by Prof. MacLean, of the Department of Classics, on the political and religious situation in the Near East.

Principal Ritchie, of the Congregational College, presided at the meeting, while Principal Rexford, of the Diocesan College, operated the projecting machine.

Prof. MacLean spent the past summer in Mesopotamia, Egypt and Palestine with an archaeological expedition. However, Prof. MacLean's remarks were based rather upon politics and religion than upon archaeology.

He explained the chaotic condition of religion and politics, outlining the rise of a simplified and virile form of Mohammedanism, called Wahabi, under the teachings of a new and mysterious prophet. This movement in Arabia has been kept in check by the liberal distribution of British subsidies among the desert chiefs. There is everywhere according to Prof. MacLean, a feeling that trouble is brewing among the wild desert tribes, and some authorities fear a Holy War. The people of Arabia are for the most part pro-Turkish rather than pro-British, the mutual tie of Mohammedism is probably the explanation of this idea. Everywhere there is general activity against the Christians of Palestine and on the whole the situation in that part of the Near East is one of danger.

Prof. MacLean questioned whether the new British Government would continue the Churchill system of paying subsidies in order to keep peace, and expressed the conviction that the Labour Party now so powerful, would be violently opposed to any such measures in the Near Eastern policy.

In describing the situation in Egypt Prof. MacLean stated that that country had fallen away from British Rule during the war, and that now there was a strong anti-British feeling among the natives in spite of the great economic prosperity which Egypt had enjoyed under the regimes of Cromer and his successors.

Among other adventures, Prof. MacLean made a trip by airplane from Cairo to Bagdad across the great desert wastes of Arabia in very few hours, a means of transportation that offered great contrasts to the old and picturesque caravans of camels across the sands.

To illustrate his remarks upon this interesting portion of British Dominions, Prof. MacLean showed many slides of ruins in Mesopotamia picturing ancient Babylon and old Assyrian cities destroyed thousands of years ago.

The whole lecture was very timely, in view of the fact that the attention of the whole world is focussed upon the Near East at present, so that this well informed account of the country by one familiar with its peoples and customs was very welcome to Prof. MacLean's audience.

SPORTS IN LITERATURE.

While sports hold a prominent place in American life and in our periodicals they have yet to inspire even an approach to a classic in our literature. Football produced a fair to middling play in "Strongheart" and rowing brought out a rather interesting dramatic effort in "Brown of Harvard." But we have yet to see the classic football story, the

HOCKEY CLUB HELD MEETING IN UNION

Many Positions Vacant on Team 5

The first meeting of the Hockey Club was held yesterday in the Union Dining Room at 5 o'clock. "Matty" Dineen took the chair. Secretary Quackenbush read the minutes, which were accepted. Representatives for the Junior and Intermediate Hockey Leagues were elected. McCall was elected for the Intermediate League, Abbot for the Junior, Puddicombe was placed in charge of the Inter-Class League.

The rumor is abroad that Queen's are out to emulate their football record. Varsity consider the hockey championship a sacred institution of their own. A new entry for the league is the University of Montreal, making a four team league, which in "Shag" Shaughnessy's opinion is much more satisfactory than a three team league. Taking it all around the hockey fans are promised some fine hockey this season.

The Junior and Intermediate Leagues have problems to be solved, before the ice is available. Permission has been granted for the formation of a Junior Intercollegiate League in Quebec, and the advisability for this new departure will be discussed.

As soon as we have ice, Inter-class hockey should be off with a bound, under the able guidance of Puddicombe. A meeting has been arranged for Monday afternoon to draw up an Inter-class schedule. Some years have not yet elected representatives. Hustle up, for those classes who are not represented will have no room for criticism if the class schedule does not suit them to the hilt.

Arrangements have been made for the formation of an Inter-faculty League, to be played off in the Christmas holidays on one of the campus rinks. This has been done in order that some men who are staying in the city will be able to get into shape for the coming season.

"Shag" spoke a few words, pointing out that there were lots of openings on the Senior, Intermediate and Junior teams for men who were "there with the rods." He also pointed out that it was from the Inter-class hockey that material is picked. He expressed his pleasure at the election of Puddicombe as head of the Inter-class hockey, and he felt sure that under such an able man, things would go well.

Now, then fellows, there is lots of chance for you to show your wares; come on, get out your skates and try for the Senior team, aim high and you will hit something.

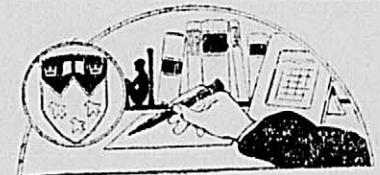

It has been arranged that the first hockey practice (date to be announced later), will be for "new men" only, so turn out, don't be bashful. And don't forget, Class Representatives, Union Dining Room, five o'clock, Monday.

truly great boxing, baseball or rowing plot.

The material, particularly in football and boxing, is there—perhaps too much of it. And the theme is not beneath the dignity of our most gifted writers. Richard Harding Davis, Owen Johnson and Jack London dabbled with sports in their writings, but their sporting literature was not on a par with their best efforts on other themes.

Sports as a subject of literary treatment beckon to modern realists. There is nothing more realistic than football—nothing more virile and forceful than a Gargantuan William topping before a Borserker Dempsey. But realists apparently have not much use for sport. In their search for the big punch they have overlooked the biggest punch of all.—New York Herald.

ARTS '25 WIN THE SEMI-FINAL DEBATE

Score Close Victory Over Commerce '24

The semi-final debate, in the Arts interclass series, "Resolved that the Immigration Laws of Canada should be made less Restrictive," was held last evening in Room 105 of the Arts Building. The affirmative was upheld by Penrose and Everett, of Arts '25, and the negative by Kerns and Robinson, of Commerce '24. The affirmative side of the argument won out. All four speakers showed considerable ability in the presentation of their subject matter, and showed also that considerable thought had been given to the preparation of material. It must be said in fairness to Commerce '24, that they had hardly an equal chance with the negative. The subject on debate was by no means an easy one, and the side upholding the affirmative undoubtedly had the easier time of it. The speech made by the second speaker for Arts deserves special mention for its clearness and good presentation, and also proved that the speaker had put much time and thought upon his work. The judges were but a few moments in deciding who were the victors, and all who were present must have felt that it was a most fair decision.

The judges were Mr. A. Nead, Willson and Willard.

A CAMPUS TEA HOUND

A tea hound is not a species of the dog family, as the name implies, but in some aspects is related to man. It may be that you know him better by such names as jelly-bean, cake eater, male flapper, or lounge lizard.

He is not a red blooded American, but a moilcoddle. He is not a business man; the only way in which he could be connected with business is that he is a walking advertisement for Arrow collars.

Like the lilies of the field, he toils not, neither does he spin. A tea hound is like that well known sea animal—the jellyfish, no backbone, but plenty of movement.

The outstanding points by which you may recognize the tea hound are: That he wears the regulation suit, bell bottoms, insets, daggers, and all the rest; that he goes without a hat in order that the girls may get the full benefit of his beautifully polished hair; that he never sits, merely drapes himself upon and around his chair; that he may be found at almost any hour upon the campus, gazing soulfully towards the girls' dormitory; that he is a regular attendant of all the teas and dansants.

He is as far removed from that other product, the cave man, as the north and south poles. He is a perfectly satisfied creature; an entirely row model, brought out as a result of too much pleasure and a lack of high ideals and a purpose in life.

MONTREAL, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1922

THE COLLEGE STUDENT

If there be one subject that has aroused discussion to a greater extent than Prohibition during the present and previous years, it is the College Student. His actions, his mannerisms, his practices and diversions have afforded topics of paramount interest to those who would constitute themselves a tribunal of judgment upon his conduct—and in this connection it might be mentioned that the few who refrain from expressions of opinion in the student controversy are noticeable only for their fewness. We have been told that the undergraduate is spineless; we have been warned that he is headstrong; we have been informed that he is extravagant, and the next word we hear is that he is parasitic; we learn that he is suited best for social teas, only to be assured in the next breath that he devotes all his time to athletics to the neglect of his studies and social welfare. His recreation is held up to contempt, and his attempts at serious application, to derision. His life, according to the critics, is a continuous round of seeking after pleasure and his lectures merely a cloak, and a means by which he contrives to dissipate his allowance and to waste his hours under the guise of one pursuing a degree. In short, if we placed faith in all we read we should be forced to the conclusion that the student constituted a social anachronism.

Notice is not taken of the fact that the College Student is peculiarly situated; that, though he is spending, he is sometimes earning. His position in a difficult and lax environment is ignored. The opportunities open to the average collegian for enjoyment, and the absence of restraint receives scant acknowledgment. The vast majority of university men, who carry themselves in the most exemplary and sedate fashion, are overlooked in the attention given to the noisy, profligate minority, prevalent in every walk of life, which abandons itself to three or four years of hilarity. Articles printed in the daily press would have us believe that the object in coming to college was to pass a few sessions in an agreeable freedom, in fearful anticipation of the years of toil awaiting us after graduation; in other words, a method of respite from the world of affairs which threatened to engulf the unwilling matriculant.

Despite all endeavours to convince us that the College Student is a contradiction within himself, we have sufficient faith in his parents who raised him, in the professors who teach him and in the man within him, to regard his future, not with despair, but with confidence. After all the student is a human being; he may react, as is to be expected, when tested under exacting circumstances, as is the case at university. He was a school-boy before his entrance to the institution of higher learning; upon his departure he will assume a station in the business or professional life of his community, of that we may rest secure. In the meantime, he is passing through a period of transition—an interim which may certainly alter phases of his character, but which, surely, can hardly effect permanent changes in his makeup, so as to designate him, once and for all, as a species distinct from those who have not attended lectures.

EDITORIAL NOTE

The Co-Eds of Queen's and McGill will meet this evening in debate. The question to be discussed is important, of that there can be no doubt; the matter of choosing the winner is also one that deserves consideration, that, too, is a fact that will not be disputed. And yet, the circumstance that is, after all, most deserving of emphasis, is that this meeting constitutes an innovation in Intercollegiate Debating, and also one in the relations existing between the Co-Eds of these two Canadian universities. This is the inauguration of a plan that merits support and acquiescence by the student body as a whole; that such will be accorded it, is practically assured by the efficient manner in which the women of the Royal Victoria College have managed the arrangement and advertising of the affair.

arrangements have been made to provide the Westerners with welcome exercise after their long train ride.

On the arrival of the Eskimos at Kingston yesterday they were met by authorities and given a warm welcome to the Limestone City. Both teams are in good condition, and are eager to get at one another, and the Queens fans are promised a battle royal. The winning team has a chance to make history, and both teams are keen to win.

Any Montreal fans who wish to go to the game can go by special cars, which will be attached to the fast train of the Grand Trunk leaving Montreal at ten o'clock to-day. The train will arrive at 11 o'clock, and a special sleeper has been arranged for those who wish to return to Montreal to-night.

ANNUAL NOTICES

Subscriptions.

Class presidents have subscription lists for the 1924 Annual. The attention of the students is drawn to the fact that no books will be published except those actually subscribed for.

Write-ups.

Class and club articles for the Annual must be handed to the Biography Editor, your Faculty representative, a member of the Annual Board, or left at the Hall Porter's desk, Union, without delay.

Photographs.

Individuals, Clubs and Societies who wish their photographs to appear in the Annual will have to telephone Mr. Burroughs at St. Louis, 5096, and make a special appointment. Because of the Christmas rush at the photographers, pictures must be taken immediately.

Proofs.

The photographers report that several proofs, chiefly of group pictures, have not yet been returned. Some of these were delivered by the photographers as long as two weeks ago. Will the groups kindly see that all proofs are returned without further delay.

The following is a revised list of headings to be published in the 1924 Annual, both humorous and serious: Arts, Arts Juniors, Commerce, Commerce Juniors, Medicine, Medicine Juniors, Science, Science Juniors, Law, Law Juniors, Dentistry, Dentistry Juniors, R.V.C., R.V.C. Juniors, Music, Theologs, M.S.P.E., Student Organizations, McGill Daily, Athletics, Mock Parliament, Fraternities, and "The End."

Although a number of the above designs have been promised, several still remain to be done, and it will be noticed that additional designs have been called for in the last few days. Those willing to undertake the design of one or more of the above headings, are urged to see the Art Editor, P. R. Wilson, Architectural Dept., Engineering Bldg., before starting work, and as soon as possible. One copy of the 1924 Annual will be awarded to every artist whose work appears in the publication.

NOTICE.

The regular monthly meeting of the Western Club will be held at the Union on Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 6.30 p.m., when dinner will be served. A prominent Westerner will be the guest of the evening, and will deliver a special address of great interest. All Westerners are specially urged to attend.

SWIMMING AND WATER POLO.

There will be a practice for swimmers and water polo players at 5.15. All are requested to turn out.

CORRECTION REGARDING POLO GAME.

Wrong information was given the Daily concerning a Senior water polo game at the M.A.A.A. tank next week.

OTHER CAMPUSES

The following paragraph is clipped from the Cincinnati University News, and has reference to a well-known gentleman who disported himself amongst us last year.

Mr. Samuel Pepys, who usually sends us his diary once a week, has been visiting his grandparents, the Grand-Pepys, but will return in time to send us a page from his journal for next week's issue.

For what sin has he fled McGill for Cincinnati?

This is what the "Southern California Trojan," the official publication of the students of the University of Southern California, thinks of the "he-vamp." Many people at McGill feel this way, too.

Of all the many and varied classes and degrees of fools in this topsyturvy world of ours, perhaps there is none more thoroughly pitiable and altogether objectionable than the he-vamp. He is a defacement of nature—a barnacle on the side of humanity.

He is seldom to be seen in the morning, but, like bats and owls and other objectionable things, he appears with the setting sun. He can be seen on any public thoroughfare or in any crowded street car at almost any hour of the night, trying to make himself conspicuous by ogling the girls around him. He is usually rather good looking, in a foppish, sissified way, and he is usually dressed in the latest—Hart, Schaffner and Marx—styles.

The trouble seems to be more mental than moral. Probably, at some previous time in his life, some girl told him that he was irresistible—and he was fool enough to believe it. He seems utterly incapable of understanding how any one of the opposite sex could possibly withstand the appeal of his languorous eyes. He is the type of man who bores you.

In Thursday's issue of the Daily a heading appeared that the game would be played on Tuesday night. This is incorrect, as the game is scheduled for Wednesday evening. No blame attaches to the Daily in this matter, the fault being that of the Swimming Club representative who gave the wrong information.

almost to death with his lengthy dissertations on how many girls have "simply worshipped" him.

The disease seems to be incurable, as no amount of snubbing has the least effect upon him. The only sensible remedy is to declare an open season on his kind, so that you may shoot them on sight.

Mills College, with a desire to try something new in the way of examinations, has adopted a method used at Gorton College, Cambridge. This method has not been in all the classes at Mills, but is being tried in one of the English courses. The questions are given to each student, who then has the right to put them away until she feels prepared or inclined to answer them. She can write as long as she desires, the only requisite being that she record the time used on the paper when she hands it in.

Heaven preserve our co-eds from such a fate as this? At the end of the term the poor dears would be buried under an insurmountable pile of unanswered exam papers and be completely lost to sight. Hic Jacet!

A mock football game between the Freshmen Flappers and the Desert Sirens of the University of Arizona, was staged between halves of a recent football game as a publicity stunt for the 1923 Desert.

About 35 Freshmen boys, powdered, rouged and dressed in co-ed attire, took part in the general upheaval which was flattered by the name of football Johnny Irvine, Junior Class president, refereed the game, but it was difficult to decide whether the Flappers or Sirens won.

They should have seen our half-time burlesque gridiron battle.

ANOTHER LIBEL ON WOMEN

He said it with flowers—
Tall tiger-lilies,
And roses of Dijon.
He said it with fruit,
Every day for a month
He sent her a pound of cranberries
And black currants and walnuts,
And big oranges.
He said it with music.
He played Beethoven's Hymn of Creation,
Sang the Discord for Six Saxophones,
Hummed "Celeste Aida,"
Whistled "Oh, you great big Candy Kid."

He said it with poetry,—
Read to her half of Spenser's "Faerie Queene,"
The Collected Works of Alexander Shobbb,

And a motto from a mammoth crack-er
But when he said it with a house
In Berkeley Square and a limousine,
She came to him like a lamb.
That's what they're like, my lad.

The World is Working for You

THE manufacturer who makes your shoes is working for you. So is the store that sells you shoes, your grocer, your clothier, and every concern or person who makes or sells anything you buy.

Often these people have messages for you. They want to tell you about new goods, new styles, new prices or other new things they think you should know about.

They can't speak to you personally because they have so many customers to serve. So they put their messages in the newspaper in the form of advertisements.

It is to your interest to read the advertisements. They are published for your benefit. They keep you informed as to what these folks are doing for you. They help you buy the right goods at the right time and to make the most of your money.

Moreover, you'll find that business concerns that tell you frankly what they are doing are the most dependable. Stores that advertise are progressive stores that have something real to say to you. Manufacturers who advertise their products have confidence in them, because it does not pay to advertise anything that is not good.

Reading advertisements is both interesting and profitable.

BASKETBALL SQUAD AT MOLSON HALL

Intermediate and Juniors in Snappy Practice Yesterday

The Intermediate and Junior Basketball squads had a stiff work-out last night in Molson Hall. The attendance was better than that at Wednesday's practice, and several members of last year's Junior and Intermediate teams were out. It is the intention this year to have three squads: Senior, Intermediate and Junior. The Senior squad consists of the Senior and Intermediate A teams, the Intermediate squad, Intermediate B, and Junior A teams, and the Junior squad will comprise those men unable to make these teams, but from whom Junior C team will be chosen.

Coach Van Wagner was in charge, and gave the new men a chance to show their wares at once, as two teams were picked from men turning out for the first time. A fast ten minute game was played under the coach's watchful eye, and at different stages in the game Van stopped the play and pointed out defects and suggested remedies. Four more teams were then made up, and everyone had the best of chances to show his worth. The games were rather ragged, due no doubt to the short period during which the men have been playing, but occasional flashes of good play were evident, particularly some good passing by the members of last year's Junior A team. A strong tendency for the guards to play too far forward was very evident, and the coach impressed upon the men playing the guard positions, that playing defence was their first and most important duty. Van also explained some of the new rules, which aim to eliminate the tendency to play the man rather than the ball.

Team work is the greatest need at the present time, and when it has been developed to high degree, individual play will improve at the same time. The success which the Senior team had last year was due very largely to their excellent team work, as manifested in their system of short, snappy passes.

During the practice Van singled out men whose work merited their being posted to the Intermediate squad, but the coach desires it to be distinctly understood that all men who are turning out will be given an equal chance, and that the composition of the Intermediate squad is not permanent.

Men on the Junior squad who show promise will be moved up to the Intermediate squad. Practices will be held at Molson Hall on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at five o'clock, for the Intermediates, and at six o'clock for the Juniors.

The following men are asked to turn out at five o'clock on Monday, at Molson Hall for the Intermediate practice: Davis, Spitzer, Cummings, Connor, Altner, Reardon, Lanzman, Rapp, Starke, Wyse, Macdonald, Tinkes, Chalmers, Quackenbush and Granik.

All other men who play basketball, whether they have been out before or not, are asked to turn out at six o'clock, after the Intermediate practice.

SENIOR BASKETBALL SCHEDULE CHANGED

The schedule of the senior basketball team has been altered, and although no dates coincide, the intercollegiate and the City League games now fall very close to one another, so that the chance of a slight rearrangement of the games is possible. The team is still working to get into the old-time form, and with their first game but a week away, the practice becomes a bit stiffer and the basketball a bit faster. The City League home games will be played in the Highlanders' Armoury, but the intercollegiate games will be held in the High School Gym.

The schedule is as follows:—
Dec. 7—Alerts at McGill.
Dec. 14—Y.M.C.A. Reds at McGill.
Dec. 16—University of Vermont at Burlington, Vt.
Dec. 20—McGill at M.A.A.A. Blues.
Dec. 29—St. Francis A.A. at Brooklyn.
Dec. 30—Crescent A. C. at Brooklyn.
Jan. 1—University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, Pa.
Jan. 3—Utica Knights of Columbus at Utica, N.Y.
Jan. 11—M.A.A.A. Blues at McGill.
Jan. 13—Queen's at McGill.
Jan. 24—McGill at Alerts.
Jan. 27—McGill at Queens.
Feb. 2—Toronto at McGill.
Feb. 3—McGill at Y.M.C.A. Reds.
Feb. 9—Clarkson Institute of Technology at Potsdam, N.Y.
Feb. 17—McGill at Toronto.

FISTS, FALLS & FOILS

What?

Boxing Eliminations!

Where?

Molson Hall.

When?

This afternoon, at 4 p.m.

Some of the best eliminations for Faculty honours are guaranteed this afternoon.

Last Saturday's bouts proved a fact that University boxers battle for honours and demonstrated a prowess unequalled in the prize ring.

Thursday night's battle for a place on the 118-lb. team from Medicine between Goldapple from the Department of Pharmacy and Brodie, from Medicine, provided a win for Brodie.

Goldapple, although a hustling husky, lost out by persistently punching in clinches.

Brodie shows speed and science, and previous ring experience, and deserves great credit for his victory.

In the Elimination bouts held last Saturday, Champion and O'Brien, of the 145 class from Science, struggled for a place on the team. Champion won the struggle. An error in the report of last Saturday's honours gave the bout to O'Brien.

The schedule for to-day's contests is:

Medicine.
118 lbs.—McKenna vs. Sherwin.
125 lbs.—Davis vs. W. A. Armstrong.
Snow vs. Fullerton.
Kelnar vs. Sheppard (Dent.)
135 lbs.—Caron vs. Reid.
145 lbs.—Craig vs. Rankin.
P. D. Ward vs. O'Mara (Dent.)
Commerce.
145 lbs.—Montgomery vs. Stanfield.
Science.
135 lbs.—Brumell vs. Pitt.
Hunter vs. Merritt.
145 lbs.—Nerontos vs. Dewis.
Champion vs. Plant.
158 lbs.—Marshall vs. Cooke.
Arts.
135 lbs.—Newball vs. Dewar.

Contestants are asked to be on hand early to weigh in.

Two pounds is allowed on all weights.

The various faculties should be well represented.

No charge for admission.

WORD BEAUTY

Think of the beauty that dwells in words. Think of the richness of Elizabethan English. Those were golden days when men sounded the charming intricacies of a tongue which was growing hourly into fresh combinations of majesty and beauty. Recall the strength and lustre and amplitude of Ben Johnson's diction; the conciseness and exactness of Bacon; the picturesqueness of Raleigh, which lends charm even where one may notice grave errors; the simple grace and matchless melody of Roger Ascham. Wordy? Yes, these writers were sometimes verbose, if we mean by that using four words where one would do. In these hurrying days we take no time to write/leisurely. We say "the fall," and we miss the brilliant picture, the tinkling music of "the fall of the leaf."

With some few writers a noun is a picture, a verb full of color, an adjective a revelation. In his "Japanese Letters," Lafcadio Hearn says, "For me words have color, form, character; they have faces, manners, gesticulations; they have humors, moods, eccentricities; they have tints, tones, personalities." The English language is rich enough, if drawn upon generously, yet with discrimination, to express all human experience. But the idea must first be acquired, then vitalized by personal experience, and finally translated into the fitting words. We ought to learn to deal honestly with words and to face our responsibility in using them.—Christian Science Monitor.

I ASK YOU

What would you think of a girl who told you that the only chance you had of kissing her was to catch her when she was not looking; and then have her sit there for the rest of the evening with her eyes closed.—Burr.

DENTS SCORE WIN OVER MED. TEAM

Heavy Hitting Feature of the Game

Last night, at the Baron Byng School, the Dental '25 nine defeated the Medical '28 team by the score of 19-18.

In the first half of the game Meds. looked like sure winners. Their team play was better and their batting extremely heavy. Olnstead, up to the fourth inning, played a sure, steady game in the box, also clouting out several long hits. In the third inning, the Meds. staged a batting rally and brought in seven runs.

The fourth inning, which was the critical point of the game, found the Meds. weak, while the Dent. players just caught their stride. In this innings the Dents. hit the ball at will and ten men crossed the plate. The Meds. were blanked in this inning, but made a desperate rally in the fifth, knocking out two runs. This left them with a four run lead. All looked bright for the Meds., when with two men out, the Dents. brought in five runs, putting them one up.

The Med. team depended mainly on individual playing, some of their men showing up to good advantage. The Dents. on the other hand, relied on united play.

O. McDonald, who is the regular pitcher for Meds., played centre field.

Heavy hitting was the feature of the game. Each side having a good number of heavy hitters.

The line-ups were as follows:—

Dents. '25.	Med. '28.
Catcher.
Gornitsky	Martin
Pitcher.
Shorker	Olnstead
1st Base.
Klein	McKinnon

IMPRESSIVE VERSES SENT TO THE "DAILY"

At the Arts Freshman-Sophomore banquet, held some time ago, Dr. Eve, head of the Department of Physics, in the course of the proposal of one of the toasts, named as an inspiring passage the famous verses from the Apocrypha, beginning "Let us now praise famous men." Verses of such truth and beauty, said Dr. Eve, should be well known to everyone, and if he thought that it would do anything to promote a more general knowledge of these noble words, he would copy them out and send them to the "Daily" for publication. The following passage has now made its appearance at the "Daily" office, typed on paper bearing the letter-head of the Department of Physics, and it is presumed that Dr. Eve has made good his promise. The sender points out that this splendid passage from the Apocrypha, found in the 44th Chapter of the Book of Ecclesiasticus, is read on Founder's Day at many universities and colleges, and for this reason, as well as for its intrinsic worth it may be of interest to many readers.

"Let us now praise famous men, and our fathers that begat us.
"The Lord hath wrought great glory by them through his great power from the beginning.

"Such as did bear rule in their kingdom, men renowned for their power, giving counsel by their understanding, and declaring prophecies;

"Leaders of the people by their counsels, and by their knowledge of learning meet for the people, wise and eloquent in their instructions:
"Such as found out musical tunes, and recited verses in writing:

"Rich men furnished with ability, living peaceably in their habitations:
"All these were honoured in their generations, and were the glory of their times.

"There be of them, that have left a name behind them, that their praises might be reported.

"And some there be, which have no memorial; who are perished, as though they had never been; and are become as though they had never been born; and their children after them.

"But these were merciful men, whose righteousness hath not been forgotten.

"With their seed shall continually remain a good inheritance, and their children are within the covenant.

"Their seed standeth fast, and their children for their sakes.

"Their seed shall remain for ever, and their glory shall not be blotted out.

"Their bodies are buried in peace; but their name liveth for evermore.
"The people will tell of their wisdom, and the congregation will shew forth their praise."

STRANGE ADVENTURE ON THE LOWER CAMPUS

One day not long ago, while wandering around the campus looking for news the Daily office boy perceived in the far distance two young damsels, leading what appeared to be a saddle horse. As the ladies in question came nearer, it was seen that the animals they were leading were really horses, which were slipping and sliding around on the ice. One beautiful young lady looked at the office boy; grinned quite loudly and smiled at her companion. She turned once more to the panicky-toned youth, addressing him in honeyed tones, saying: "Would you kindly help us onto our mounts?" Homer, overcome by the gravity of the situation, succeeded in stammering a weak affirmative. By some manner, unknown to himself, he managed to cross the ditch which separated them. The sweet young lady, covered with confusion, and blushing a maidenly blush, explained that the horses were extremely skittish and that having dismounted through fear of a broken wishbone, they were unable to regain their former elevated positions. She further added that in the past they had always used a stepladder for this delicate operation. She then went on to state that as the steps of the Arts building were the only things in the vicinity which resembled the article just named in the slightest degree, they were now journeying (on foot) towards that distant shrine. As they were bashful maidens it was quite evident that they were desirous of some secluded spot in which they might perform this dangerous and delicate acrobatic feat.

However, Homer braced himself to the mighty task and with a spirit that would have put Arthurian chivalry to shame, he offered himself on this altar of sacrifice. Then with a mighty Herculean effort—his very muscles were bulging—he succeeded in replacing one fair, though unhappy, damozel upon her lofty pedestal. The other equestrienne, spurred on with a spirit of rivalry and not to be outdone by mere male, leapt to the back of her foaming steed.

Then flashing the most brilliant of brilliant smiles, the riders thanked Homer for his courtesy and galloped up the campus amidst the cheers and loud laughs of the gathering multitude. Homer, however, did not swell up with pride and self-esteem but in a manner, truly modest, continued on his way rejoicing.

SIGN OF WEDLOCK

"There goes another married man," said the girl at the candy counter.
"How do you know?" asked the cashier.
"He used to buy a three-pound box of candy twice a week and now he buys half a pound once a month."

PURDUE MEMORIAL NEARLY COMPLETED

Indiana School Erects Costly Building

Work on the Purdue University Memorial Union Building is going forward rapidly. It is to be one of the most complete of its kind in the United States. The Union, which is to cost $1,250,000, is expected to become the center of the university, and its aim is to draw closer every branch of the institution, fraternity, non-fraternity, and faculty, in the task of creating a greater Purdue.

The main entrance, which is surmounted by a tower, leads to the Great Hall and the concourse on the first floor. The Great Hall will form the memorial part of the building. On the first floor are also included the men's lounge room, and the assembly room, which will seat 500 at a banquet, or accommodate 350 at a dance or reception. Here future university social functions will take place. In the basement will be found a cafeteria to accommodate 800 ordinarily, serving three times per meal, and about 1,000 at peak loads. A billiard room and barber shop will also be located in the basement.

On the second floor is to be the women's lounge room, private dining rooms, a large dining and conference room and space for accommodating all campus activities. It is expected that this first wing of the structure will be completed and prepared for occupancy about Jan. 1, 1923. The second or right wing of the building will contain hotel accommodation for university visitors and alumni, bowling alleys, visiting varsity teams' dormitories and billiard room.

FIRST QUALM FOR FRESHMEN.

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the unlearned,
Nor standeth not in the way of professors,
Nor sitteth not in the back seat of the classroom;

But his delight is in the laws of old Newton,
And on his laws he doth meditate day and midnight,

And he shall be like a grind with his feet in hot water,
That bringeth forth good marks in examination.

Whose allowance doth not wither;
And whatsoever he propoundeth shall be recorded forever.

The unlearned are not so,
But are like the sheep which are summoned to slaughter,

Therefore the unlearned shall not stand in the examination,
Nor shirkers in the throng of Olympus;
For the dean knoweth the way of delinquents;

But the way of the studious continues forever.

heartily appreciated by all.

The two supper extras, moreover, proved to be extremely popular, owing to the fact that only half the guests were dancing. In consequence, those who had any pet tricks or eccentric steps were able to indulge in them to their heart's content.

Immediately after the second supper, the dancers all repaired to the ball room. The remaining hours of the evening passed with extreme rapidity and before it was realized the strains of the last waltz were heard and another excellent and enjoyable informal had come to a conclusion.

According to the schedule which was drawn up at the first of the year, the next Informal is scheduled for December 15 and it should prove to be a very enjoyable pre-Christmas event.

Just before going to press it was noticed with amazement that several prominent scenic stars were attending the dance. The "Daily" made hasty investigations but was unable to secure interviews with these outstanding guests. It is rumoured that there were present such well known figures as Lila and Lulu Lee, Bebe Daniels, Mary Pickford and Pola Negri. Moreover, it is learned on good information that they were accompanied by members of a certain McTavish street fraternity. A further investigation of the matter has been ordered.

Among those present last night were:

NEED FOR BETTER ENGLISH IS URGED

Smith College President Deprecates Use of Slang

Dr. William Allan Neilson, president of the Smith College, Northampton, Mass., in an address to the Parents and Teachers' Association of the Ethical Culture School, on "The Need for Better English," charged the great majority of the people with using English that is full of mistakes in grammar, pronunciation, and choice of words.

The speaker pointed out that as English is the foundation of all education in the case of English-speaking peoples, a knowledge of the correct use of the mother tongue was needed to enrich the life of the individual and to make men successful in business. He also condemned the use of slang, ascribing its prevalence to laziness, and describing it on the whole as dull and colorless, though admitting that some slang expressions are forceful and picturesque.

"An imperfect command of English," said Dr. Neilson, "hinders a man or woman not only from telling other people that he or she thinks, from converting them to his or her plans and ideas and from letting them know how he or she feels, but it also keeps him or her from learning from others, what their thoughts and feelings are."

"Most people assume that because they speak English every hour, that there is no need to study it as a spoken language. We obey most of the rules of grammar through imitation without knowing why we do it. We learned grammar chiefly that when we make mistakes we may be able to see where the mistake lies. Sometimes these mistakes are serious, so serious that they make our meaning doubtful or wrong. Other mistakes make no great difference in the meaning, but give the impression of slovenliness or lack of education."

"Rules of pronunciation are also the result of habit. They are not logical and cannot be arrived at by reasoning, except that pronunciation like spelling can usually be explained when we know the history of words."

"As civilization goes on there are fewer and fewer differences between dialects and pronunciation approaches more and more to a standard which all use and understand. This standard is not the form of speech used by the largest number of people. It is rather than of the best educated and most refined. Those who conform to that standard are they who can go from one state to another or from one English-speaking country to another and be intelligible everywhere without difficulty and without appearing provincial—that is, without showing the marks and limitations of their own little part of the world."

"Pronunciation is not merely a matter of being understood, but may also be a source of pleasure or distress. Oftener than we know, our delight in the company of a friend is due to the pleasant sound of his voice, and the way which he utters his words. The opposite case is equally frequent. A harsh or squeaking voice may make a person otherwise attractive very unpleasant. Many a beautiful woman loses her charm as soon as she begins to speak."

"In writing, the ability to express oneself clearly and forcibly is scarcely less important than in speaking. Learning to write is part of the necessary preparation for any career; and even those who have no business or profession write letters. In days when people were less hurried than they are now, letter writing was an art in which a great many were skilled; and thousands of men and women who had no pretensions to being literary, wrote to their friends and relatives epistles full of charm and interest to the present day. Though we may not aspire to revive this lost art, it is still possible to sustain and enrich our intercourse with our friends by making our letters interesting and agreeable reading. Furthermore, the greater part of business is carried on by correspondence, and skill in composing clear and effective business letters is one of the greatest aids in the commercial world."

"The study of the art of writing then is a necessity for the ordinary man as for the author, since the lack of training in it is a handicap in almost every department of life, and hinders us in a thousand ways in establishing and maintaining that kind of intercourse with our fellows on which much of the interest and value of life depends."

To use words well we have to gain a clear and precise knowledge of their meaning, and then to make sure that those we use correspond to our thought. This means work and often hard thinking; and there are few things people dislike to do more than hard thinking; and there are few things people dislike to do more than hard thinking. The chief cause of our incorrect use of words is laziness. This appears in the use of slang.

Some slang expressions are forcible or picturesque; but the greater part of common slang consists in making one word which happens to be fashionable for the moment do the work of many. It is less trouble to use such a word in sentence than to find the appropriate one for each case. A few years ago 'ferce' was used for everything that
